

INTERNATIONAL SECURITY POLICY (ISP)

International Security Policy Curriculum

The International Security Policy concentration is designed for students interested in international conflict and conflict management, defense policy, military strategy, arms control, intelligence, peacekeeping, coercion, negotiation, and alternatives to the use of force as an instrument of policy. It provides a conceptual foundation for understanding conflict and the political, economic, and military components of policies and capabilities for coping with the possibility of war, as well as expertise for analyzing specific functional and regional security issues.

ISP students are expected to fulfill the following requirements for a total of 15 credits.

- The required gateway course, INAF U6874 Foundations of International Security Policy
- Two courses (or 6 credits) in ONE of five career focus areas -- their "primary area"
 - Intelligence Analysis, Counterterrorism, and Risk Assessment
 - Defense Policy and Analysis
 - Foreign Policy and Diplomacy
 - Cybersecurity
 - Legislative Affairs
- Two courses (or 6 credits) in electives -- can be taken from any focus area

Students who entered the International Security Policy concentration before Fall 2022 may continue with their original program of study.

ISP Focus Areas and Eligible Courses:

The five ISP career-oriented focus areas are listed below, with each having a corresponding list of eligible courses. You will notice that many courses count for more than one focus area; this is by design and reflects the overlap in the professional requirements for success in different career fields within ISP. You may take more than two courses in a single focus area if you wish, enabling greater depth of preparation in a particular field; you may also experiment in other focus areas via your electives if you are less certain about which type of career you would like to pursue after graduation, or if you seek breadth of knowledge over depth.
